II. Coordination of the atoms - IUCr

II. Coordination of the atoms. The coordination number [N] of an atom is given by the number of coordinating atoms; the definition of 'coordinating atoms' depends on the bonding model, the nature of the problem and the calculation methods. The coordination polyhedron of an atom is the polyhedron that has vertices coincident with the centres of coordinating atoms. In structures which contain lone electron pairs and in which volumes ascribable to these lone electron pairs are comparable with
