Differential Equations Boundary Value Problems

With boundary value problems we will have a differential equation and we will specify the function and/or derivatives at different points, which we call boundary values. For second order differential equations, which will be looking at pretty much exclusively here, any of the following can, and will, be used for boundary conditions.

Boundary value problem Wikipedia

A boundary value problem has conditions specified at the extremes ("boundaries") of the independent variable in the equation whereas an initial value problem has all of the conditions specified at the same value of the independent variable (and that value is at the lower boundary of the domain, thus the term "initial" value).

boundary conditions say that one end of the beam ($x = 0$) is rigidly attached. The second two boundary conditions say that the other end of the beam ($x = L$) is simply supported. 2 Finite-Difference Method We will use a finite-difference method to obtain numerical solutions to boundary value problems.
